Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

Friends informed this writer after reading Monday's column that it was a bit blood-thirsty. It is quite true, there is something revolting in the proposal to hang Messrs. Hitler, Goebels, Himmler, et al, including in "et al" all the underlings guilty of atrocious crimes against the human race. But that was the way we felt Monday and now confess we still feel that way. International law, observed nowadays in the breach, should be immediately re-constituted at the end of World War No. 2, and leaders of nations which pounce on and murder citizens in peaceful neighboring nations should be dealt with just as murderers are dealt with in civil life in most countries.

We have ventured to predict that your Uncle Sam would probably not be drawn into the European war. He can play a more useful role as a benevolent neutral in supplying food and war materials to the allies. This is precisely what he is doing now, and this time he is very likely to advance credit for these things without expectation of being repaid in cash.

But we have never felt so sure about Uncle Sam's future course in the Pacific. It rather looks as if, before the European war is over, Uncle Sam will have to use his navy to teach the aggressive Japanese a lesson. At the end of the World War No. 1, Japan was given a mandate over certain rather useless Pacific islands. It was not much of an award, but it was plenty for all that Japan did in the way of aiding the Allies. The only use these islands could have would be as naval supply bases in event Japan wished to extend its empire toward the south and the Dutch East Indies. Japan itches to be at this business, while all the European owners of South Sea possessions are deeply involved in the war with Germany. The U. S. Navy that lingers in the vicinity of the Hawaiian Islands is a strong deterrent.

A bulletin from the Institute of Pacific Relations just received contains an interesting discussion of Anglo-American policies, which for some years have been parallel, but are now, under stress of the war in Europe, beginning to diverge. We quote from this bulletin:

"Great Britain and the United States are generally understood to have parallel policies toward Far Eastern problems. Throughout the 19th Century, meant opening and keeping open the doors to Far Eastern markets. In the 20th Century it has involved resisting Japan's drive toward economic and political domination of the Far East at the expense of the western powers.

"Parallel is probably a misnomer. Great Britain and the United States have similar interests in the Far East. Confronted by the same problem, they have reacted in similar ways. But their policies have been moulded and pursued in widely differing circumstances.

At the bottom, the peoples of the United States and Great Britain have the same understanding of human values---the same criteria of attainment of the ultimate objectives of foreign policy. But the ways in which they have gone about securing their ultimate objectives—peace, security, livelihood and political liberty — have varied with the circumstances in which they were required to employ the means at their disposal.

"It was during the Great War that the mushroom growth of Britain's ally, Japan, became a threat to Britain's interests in the Far East. At the same time it was clear that Great Brtiain's European interests were of paramount concern in terms of empire security. Great Britain did not hesitate to discard the proximate objectives of Chinese integrity and the Far Eastern balance of power in favor of the existence of the British nation as threatened by the German war machine. Of this period, a report from the Royal Institute of International Affairs says, "British diplomacy in the Far East—became, for the time being, merely

STATE CHAMBER MOVES TO EASE MIGRANT BURDEN

By LLOYD LAPHAM
United Press Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, May 16.—(UP)—The California state chamber of commerce today recommended an 8-point program to alleviate the migratory labor problem.

The chamber's recommendations were contained in a study by a statewide committee on the migrant problem, which the chamber endorsed. Points in the proposed program are:

1. Equalization of relief and rehabilitation programs in other states with those in California in order to lessen the inducement to migrate to this state.
2. Federal grants in aid for relief to states from which migrants come.
4. Support for any move to provide an unbiased Congressional study of the problem.
5. Reorganization of the California state employment service.
6. Developments of more adequate information on current crop developments and farm labor requirements.
7. Continuation of vigorous state inspection of labor camps.
8. Continuation and enlargement of the farm security program.

The study emphasized that the disparity between California relief, old age pension and unemployment payments has had a great effect in inducing farm laborers to come to California. It also pointed out that the farm security administration apparently has not made sufficient effort to control the migrations at their source, since expenditures by that agency in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Missouri have been far below the national average.

To increase relief and allied payments in states of origin, if the state itself is not able to do so, the study recommended that Congress undertake some sort of grant-in-aid program in cooperation with the governments concerned.

The committee declared that the labor policy of Arizona growers, and to a certain extent state agencies, has indirectly increased the flow of migrants to California. Since the inception of the cotton growing industry in that state, the committee found, Arizona growers have advertised in other states for workers.

Once started on the move, these workers in perhaps a majority of the cases have kept on until they reached California, the study said. In the fall of 1937 alone 30,000 out-of-state workers were attracted to Arizona while the California border stations were counted more than 10,000 entrants who had lived in Arizona long enough to acquire automobile license plates from that state.

The committee urged support of the Tolan resolution in Congress calling for a joint congressional committee to investigate and recommend action on emergency phases of the problem of interstate migration.

In addition, the committee recommended that the national resources planning board study the migrant problem, and that the facts of the problem be placed before any other federal board or legislative committee dealing with any of its phases.

The committee declared flatly that the farm employment section of the state departments of employment has not been doing an adequate job. The study contrasted the 47,000 farm labor placements made by the California department with more than 500,000 made last year by the Texas service.

Complementing the placement service, the committee urged that public and private agencies develop a system for gathering adequate information on current crop developments and farm labor requirements. This is needed, the committee said, both for the better guidance of seasonal workers to available jobs, and for the proper location of camps and housing.

In addition to a strict inspection system of farm labor camps, the committee recommended that a plan for lowering interest rates for farm construction loans suggested that relief labor be used to construct camp facilities on farms, with material furnished by the owners.

The continuation of the SRA camp program was recommended, but it was recommended that the agency concentrate on quantity rather than quality of dwellings and that local governments and associations be consulted concerning the location of new construction.

FRANK GHIDOTTI HAS A WAY WITH TROUT

Frank Ghidotti, local sportsman, brings in the limit of trout each time he goes out. Wednesday he went out with Bud Kyle and they brought back eleven trout apiece and a weight limit. All the fish were from 13 to 14 inches long. They were Rainbow, German and Loch Leven fish and weighed three quarters of a pound each. These trout were caught in Blue Lake and it was a hard trip. They mired down once, had to cut a tree out of the way and finally knocked off a plug which drained the gas tank. They had to take a part of a gallon of gas out of their outboard motor boat and put in a small amount each time until they made Bear Valley grade and then managed to get to Nevada City.

W. C. Bufgington was one of the lucky fishermen this week as he brought in a fine limit of trout Tuesday. Will E. Wright also caught a limit of trout in a nearby stream.

TABLET TO MARK FAMED FRENCH CORRAL BLDG.

Columbia Parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West are sponsoring a marker to be placed on the old Wells Fargo building at French Corral next Sunday, May 19, at 2 o'clock in the arternoon. The building is now used as a store by W. E Moulton.

The marker will commemorate the first long distance telephone in the world. It extended from French Corral to French Lake, 60 miles distant.

Columbia Parlor is also in charge of the program, features of which will be the dedication ceremony, the short historical sketches of the old mining town of French Corral and an original poem. Refreshments will be served. The public is cordially invited by Columbia Parlor to attend.

E. G. Meyer, of Seattle, son of Arthur Meyer, the stage driver who was murdered by a bandit in Blue Tent in 1894 was a visitor in Nevada City early this week. Mr. Meyer left Nevada City in 1900 and this was his first return here in forty years. He looked up many old friends of his late father.

Arthur Meyer formerly drove the stage between North Bloomfield and Nevada City. He was killed by a bandit in Blue Tent, who attempted to rob the stage of bullion it was carrying. In recent years the Natice Sons and Daughters have erected tablets to his memory on the scene of the crime, and also one for Sheriff Douglass, who was killed, presumably by the same bandit a short time later on Cement Hill.

GRAND PARLOR DELEGATES

Dr. C. W. Chapman and Clarence Martz have been chosen as delegates from Hydraulic Parlor, N. S G. W., to attend a meeting of the grand parlor from May 20 to 23 in Bakersfield. It is the 63rd grand parlor session and about 3,000 delegates are expected to attend.

College Students—

Oscar Odegaard, Jr., and guest, Harry Zell, who are attending Santa Clara college, spent the past week end and Mothers D'ay in Nevada City visiting Odegaard's mother, brother and sisters.

SENIOR BALL IS TONIGHT'S GREAT EVENT

By BARBARA PHARISS

The Class of 1940 invites the public to their annual senior ball Friday night at the gymnasium. The seniors are working hard to make it a successful event and have decorated the hall in an unusual manner.

The theme is "Graduation" and the theme song will be "Moonlight Serenade." Captain Carter's popular 10-piece orchestra will supply the music and will wear their mortar boards, to carry out the theme. The colors are midnight blue and silver. The seniors will have some favors to distinguish them.

There will be a punch bowl and the girls who serve punch will wear unique costumes. Bill Wagner, class president, will lead the grand march. Other class officers are Hal Draper, vice-president; Jane Bennett, secretary; and Luburn Williams, treasurer.

The committees for the ball deserve special credit for their hard work. The chairmen for the various committees are decoration, Jane Bennett; advertising, Bill Wagner; refreshments, Bob Schmidt; music, Margaret Odegaard. Mrs. Flewellen, the class advisor has been especially helpful to the seniors.

There are other surprises in store for those who attend and an enjoyable evening anticipated The prices are spectators, 25 cents, couples $1.

The faculty and class presidents met Thursday noon to discuss the applications for school letters recently turned in. A letter is earned by earning ten points in three fields such as athletics, music, cultural administrative, and school service. It is an honor to obtain one of these letters, and not many students have the qualifications.

PLAY DAY

Fifteen girls have been invited to attend the play-day in Grass Valley Friday. Miss Ruiter has selected the girls and they will compete in such games as tennis, baseball, basketball, volleyball and track throughout the day.

ONLY ONE DISSENTER VOTES NO ON GARLAND

SACRAMENTO, May 16.—(UP)—Because the governor added a supplementary call to the special session, the houses are playing leapfrog from one session to another. And a new set of officers was required for the new session, the election being a mere formality. But there was some speculation as to whether Assembly Speaker Garland would receive any blackballs, in view of the fight over his election last February.

Only one "red light" was cast against Garland's selection.

It came from George Collins, San Francisco democrat. The rest of the voting board was a solid green blanket of approval.

WILL BE MARRIED

Hugo Albert Helbach, 29, of Nevada City, and Adele Hancock, 18, Grass Valley applied for a marriage license in the Nevada county seat Wednesday, May 15.

SECOND HAND STORE

Gene Melton of Grass Valley has leased the antique shop on Coyote street from Mrs H. Shaw and plans to move here in two months to reside. His brother, Frank, who is visiting with him, is now at the store. Mr. Melton plans to conduct a second hand store and has made several changes in rearranging interior furnishings.

From Reno—

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Haddy of Reno, Nev., spent last Sunday visiting Haddy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Haddy of Park Avenue.

Killed Rattler—

A group of workmen coming out from the Lake Bowman country Wednesday morning, consisting of Sam Frye, Ted Swartz, Bill Little, Harold Flynn killed a large rattlesnake. They went into the Bowman district on April 4 and have been employed there by the Nevada Irrigation District on flume work.

MILL AT GIANT KING IS BURNED

Fire of undetermined origin burned the big mill at the Giant King mine south of Washington some time near midnight Wednesday. The new interests had just installed several new parts to the mill and were in shape for active operations.

E. L. Baxter, fire enforcement officer for the Tahoe National Forest, and J. D. Rafferty, law enforcement officer of the local national forest, made a trip to the Giant King mine yesterday morning to make an investigation. The fire spread about the mine building but did not do any damage to nearby forest areas. The burning of the mill will be quite a great loss to the company.

KENTUCKY RIDGE MINE

Ore is being mined and milled at the Kentucky Ridge mine in the Spenceville district. A. Adams of Grass Valley owns the Kentucky Ridge property and has leased it to J. D. Calhoun.

REWARD PLACER

Henry and Herbert Paine are still operating their gravel property, the Reward placer, near North Bloomfield. Three men are employed. The ground was shaped up for spring season during last fall and winter and the wet season is giving them a longer run than usual.

CALEDONIA PROPERTY

Charles Jasper of Los Angeles is installing a gravel washing plant at the old Caledonia gravel mine near Downieville. A one and a quarter yard shovel will handle the gravel. Electricity has been brought to the property and work will be on a three shift basis. It was estimated there are five million yards of gravel to work and it ranges from 35 to 75 feet in depth. R. Jones of Downieville is president of the company.

OXFORD PROPERTY

Tom Reeves, engineer in charge of the Sierra Oxford Mines, Inc., near Downieville is going forward with plans to reopen the property. The road is too be improved and some new buildings erected.

MURCHIE MINE

The cross cut being driven at the Murchie mine is in close to 4,000 feet and reports are that the additional 2,000 feet will be completed the first of September. The tunnel is timbered where necessary. The men driving the tunnel have hit several water courses since the last heavy flow that caused them to close down for a day or two. The cross cut is on an incline that drains into the Murchie mine shaft and water then pumped into Deer Creek.

GRAVEL OPERATIONS

Reports are that there will be extensive operations in the North Bloomfield district in a short time when tests are completed and a drag line is moved into the district.

REDWOOD FILM DELIGHTS ROTARY

At a meeting of Rotary yesterday deep interest was shown in a redwood movie film shown by Carl Libbey, program chairman. H. Kjorlie provided the projector. The film gave the Redwood Empire story t,he redwoods in trees, as groves and logged over in the right way. Some trees shown in this film were growing when the Crusades took place.

The modern method of transporting logs by huge trucks, air tramways, to the mills and the different uses for this timber, such as rail road ties, piles, etc. Old Fort Ross, built in early days by the Russians was constructed of redwood and is still in good condition.

The monthly survey of mining employment throughout the county reveals a considerable increase in employment. The total number as reported by mines in operation is 2,476 with a monthly payroll of approximately $371,400 among the 38 mines covered in the survey.

The Lava Cap has added 30 men to its payroll since the last report. Idaho Maryland has also increased its working forces at the New Brunswick. Ocean Star, an old property near the Gaston in the Washington district, is resuming work with 12 men employed. On Greenhorn placers 12 men are now employed. Scotts Flat operations have shut down until the water situation for Grass Valley has been cleared up. Mary Jane and Muscardini gravel claims are being worked. There is an unverified report that work on gravel deposits in the vicinity of North Bloomfield will soon begin. The following reports have been received from various properties:

NEW DREDGING OUTFIT

H. Pascoe and partner have a lease on gravel property near the old Anthony House in the Spenceville district and work has been in progress a month. Two men are operating the small dredger which is making a good recovery of gold.

BIG JIM PROPERTY

The C. C. Colombo interests, of Southern California who have operated the Big Jim mine near Graniteville for several years, have leased the property to Los Angeles motion picture people. Within the past ten days several persons have gone to the mine with a view to re-conditioning it and resuming operations. There is one wide vein of good grade milling ore that has had some work done on it. There is a small mill and several buildings on the property. Heavy snow crushed and damaged the buildings three years ago but these were reconditioned last season.

OCEAN STAR PROPERTY

Last Friday crews started pumping out the shaft at the Ocean Star mine in the Washington district near the old Gaston property. Clark Waite of Washington is in charge of the work. There are twelve men employed. This property has been idle since 1920. Mr. Baker of Nevada has an option on the property.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder if good citizens,
Though dark earth's skies may be,
Will follow through these troubled days
The Star of Liberty;
We need not fear the foes without—
Their folly and their sin,
If we can guard the homeland gates
And bind the foes within.

I wonder if any sequence of events, could be more fittingly arranged than was the succession of special weeks and days whose observance we but recently honored.

Good Citizenship Week, Music Week, and Mother's Day, are linked together as by a law divine, and in their observance, we are reminded that integrity, beauty and love can never die and that their powers for good will eventually right the wrongs committed by intolerance, dishonor, greed and hate.

Training for good citizenship begins in the home and under the supervision of wise and thoughtful parents, whose concepts of right living are established upon sure and steadfast foundations.

Musical appreciation, like the building of character, begins early in the child's life: it is fostered by the songs his mother sings, and by the lilting bits of verse she encourages him to learn.

Ignorance of good music is no longer to be condoned; the noblest and most beautiful compositions of world music, is brought into our homes by the magic of radio: schools and colleges conduct courses in musical appreciation. The enobling and refining influences of this sublime art, are now available to everyone.

Mother's Day is certainly the most beautiful of our annual observances. It comes to us with tender memories of the past, or joyous reunions for the present. It comes to remind us that in the unbroken home and under the guidance of loving parents, good citizenship is established in the hearts and minds of those who, in time, will tend the home fires of Liberty and Peace and gude the destiny of a great and favored nation—Our America.

The epitome of good citizenship is expressed in the Athenian Oath: I have quoted it upon previous occasions: I shall use it once again: substituting for the words, "our city," the words—Our America.

"We will never bring disgrace to this Our America, by any act of cowardice or ever desert our suffering comrades in the ranks; we will fight for the ideals and sacred things of Our America, both alone and with many; we will revere and obey Our America's laws and do our best to incite like respect and reverence in those about us, who are prone to annul or set them at naught; we will strive unceasingly to quicken the public sense of American duty. Thus, in all ways, we will transmit Our America not less but greater, better and more beautiful, than it was transmitted to us."

Uncle Silas says: "Great war lords are pinning iron crosses upon the breasts of their national heroes; they are also branding the hearts of distracted women and children with the iron cross; and they are binding the cross of iron upon the backs of their own and succeeding generations. It shall never happen here." —A. MERRIAM CONNER.

A Story In Silver

We don't see many silver dollars any more.

They used to have a good comforting touch to the palm of the hand, and a pocketful of silver was a fine thing to have. But silver dollars were kind of unwieldly, and by common consent they dropped out of fashion.

The other day, though, a Midwestern company brought silver dollars back into circulation for a brief day of glory. It paid its whole payroll in silver dollars, in order to watch the way that the industrial payroll circulated all through the community.

The results were enlightening for all concerned. As silver dollars passed across store counters, from hand to hand and pocketbook to pocketbook, the community gained an entirely new conception of the important part that the industrial dollar plays in bringing prosperity and general well-being into a town where a factory's located.

Whether the plant's wages are paid in silver or paper money, the money circulates widely and does a lot of good. And when the example of a single town is repeated and multiplied all over the country, a new concept arises and a basic truth is emphasized: In the community or the nation as a whole, when industry prospers everyone prospers. — Contributed.

"REAPING THE WHIRLWIND"

Politically Speaking

By JOHN W. DUNLAP
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, May 16.—(UP)—Many questions were answered for California citizens when results of the primary election were added up and an anaylsis made of the rather surprising vote.

For one thing, even the Roosevelt supporters did not quite expect to run up a 7 to 1 advantage over John Garner, or a 3 to 1 sweep over the entire Democratic field.

Republicans were pleasantly surprised that 42 per cent of the party registration would take the trouble to vote for the single delegation. They interpreted it as a new surge of strength, a protest against the third term issue.

There were some discouraging surprises too. Promoters of the ham and eggs pension plan must have been disappointed that their million votes of six months dwindled away to less than 100,000. This does not mean that a definite ham and eggs plan on the November ballot would not get a large vote, but it indicates that dissension within the pension movement makes it harder for the leaders to do the dictating.

Another surprise package was the poor showing of the Patterson forces, far back in the ruck with barely 50,000 votes. This vote was a showdown for the CIO and left-wing forces who opposed the president and most other factions of the party. Most tangible result was a wet blanket on the senatorial aspiration of Lieut. Gov. Patterson.

Trying to predict the outcome in November is only speculation until candidates are named by the national conventions. Unless the Democrats patch up the breaks, a united Republican minority might sneak in with a victory. If the president runs for a third term, it would be pretty safe to bet on Franklin Roosevelt.

Biggest question marks in November will be the votes of the Garner forces, the majority in each party which stayed away from the polls last week, and the 172,000 voters who declined to join a party or belonged to minority parties and hence lost their vote in the primary.

The Olson forces are spreading the word that the landslide for the Roosevelt-Olson ticket will spike the recall movement against the governor. The recall committee declares just as confidentially that the wheels will keep on turning and the election will be qualified for August or September.

While it may not stave off an election at this late date, the primary vote unquestionably was a boon to Olson. He was a leader of the third term boom and constantly emphasized it was a "Roosevelt-Olson" ticket. The victory will be used as backbone stiffener for certain members of the legislature who have wavered whether or not to support the governor.

The result may not influence the 10 or a dozen members of the Democratic coalition against the governor in the state assembly but neither will it hasten converts to the other side. The governor is in a better position to bargain and can bask in reflected glory of the president.

From the governor's standpoint, it was a timely victory because the state legislature convened today, and plenty of criticism and pressure was headed his way from the hostile majorities in both houses.

Perhaps it was the handwriting on the wall but something has persuaded the governor to mingle with the populace to a greater degree than before. By nature a quiet and reserved person, Olson was a complete contrast to the genial handshaking Frank F. Merriam, who preceded him in office. The governor's official family includes several newspapermen who had been preaching, without too much success, that personal contact with voters is invaluable.

After the spring floods in the Sacramento valley, he convoyed a group of newspapermen and state officials through the damaged county. Several weeks later, he mapped out a 10-day speaking tour of Southern California. Just recently, he went to Shasta dam for three days, again taking along newspapermen and making speeches at all stops. He even joined a parade at Willows and officiated at a district track meet in Orland.

Then with the legislature all ready to start, the governor made a spot in his busy schedule for a quick jaunt to the Fresno relays.

SCOOP THURMAN
At the State Capitol

THURMAN

Your legislators are back at the state capitol after a recess of some two and a half months during which time several committees have been investigating relief, taxation, proposed economies in government and other matters of vital interest to the people of the state.

Your assemblyman served on the special economy and efficiency committee and also attended hearings conducted by the joint senate and assembly relief and unemployment committee.

As we met this week we find ourselves conducting two special sessions each day, the regular unfinished special session and a new second session called this week by Gov. Olson for flood relief legislation. We now understand that the governor intends to call a third special session for the consideration of another matter not contained in the agenda of hte other sessions.

In order to facilitate matters the legislature meets in special second extraordinary session in the mornings and in the afternoons we meet in regular extraordinary session. So your legislature is conducting two sessions each day. However, there is little confusion as the two special sessions in one have been well organized.

The most important matter which will come up for consideration during the present special sessions will of course be the matter of another relief appropriation. The fact finding relief committee has filed a part of its lengthy report and will file the balance of the report later this week.

A majority of the legislators appear to favor returning the administration of relief to the counties, with the state furnishing the funds. This was recommended by the special committee referred to above. This committee believes that the cost of administration of relief by the counties would not exceed 15 per cent as compared with 25 per cent and more under state administration.

It is too early to predict what action will be taken on the various revenue bills sponsored by the administration but I can say that the majority of the legislators are opposed to increased taxes of any kind.

The present session will probably last two or three weeks.

GEORGE CALANAN GIVES MOTHERS DAY ADDRESS

At a Mother's Day service Sunday at the Elks Club rooms, largely attended, George Calanan delivered the following impressive address:

"Our task tonight is to pay homage to the mothers here present of today, of yesterday and tomorrow. The task should be easy and gracious.

"The idea of a National Mother's Day grew out of a service that was held in 1908 in Philadelphia, where Miss Ann Jarvis spoke at a memorial service in honor of her mother at a Sunday school where her mother had been very active and very much beloved. In 1914 Congress passed a resolution providing that the second Sunday in May, hereafter, be designated and known as Mother's day. The resolution read as follows:

"'Whereas, the services renddered in the United States by the American Mother is the greatest source of the country's strength and inspiration, and whereas we honor ourselves and the Mothers of America when we do anything to give emphasis to the home as the fountainhead of the State, and whereas the American Mother is doing so much for the home, for moral uplift and religion, so much for good government and humanity;

Therefore, be it resolved that the President of the United States is hereby authorized and requested to issue a Proclamation calling upon the Government officials to display the flag on all Government buildings, and the People of the United States to display the flag at their homes or other suitable places, on the second Sunday in May, as a public expression of our love and reverance for the Mothers of our country."

On May 9, 1914, President Woodrow Wilson issued the proclamation, and for over a quarter of a century we have observed Mother's Day. Actually it dates back farther. Since the advent of time the human race has burned incense of respect, love and reverence at the Shrine of Motherhood. We recall, it is recorded in the Old Testament that Moses descended from the Mountain with the tablet on which were inscribed the Ten Commandments, which were given to the tribes of Judea. One of these was "Honor thy Father and thy Mother" and, after more than six thousand years this is the law of the universe. Failure to observe this by man or woman, ostrasizes them and they are classed as being bereft of decency and manhood and unfit to hold communion with self-respecting members of society.

At a later date, we behold the Mother of the God-man of the New Testament raised to a pinicale of glory and made a part of the dogma and ritual, second only to the Omnipotent God and worshiped and revered by millions of the members of the Catholic church. After nearly two thousand years the resolution adopted by Congress is the natural sequence of the evolution of mankind, in paying homage to the deepest, purest instinct of the human soul. The highest and most inspiring pages of history are those that record her sacrifices, her prayers, her fears, her tears. Nearly a century ago, in less than one hours ride from this very hall, one of the most gruesome and tragic incidents in the history of the State occured. Due to early and unprecedented storms, the ill fated Donner party, composed of ninety souls, was entrapped and was foreed to spend the winter above Donner Lake. This was in November, 1846. Illy clothed and provisioned, lacking in experience, tragedy, terror and despair, unbelievable was their lot. Forty-eight survived. It is not of this I would speak, but the super-human eforts and perfect example of Mother sacrifice and Mother love exhibited by the heroic mother, Mrs. Breen. In March, rescue parties finally reached camp above Donner and gathered the survivors, retraced their steps over the Summit and reached the place which they had selected on the way in as a suitable campsite. In order to save packing, their provisions which were to serve them at this camp and the rest of the trip out to Bear Valley, were cached. They found wild animals had devoured and destroyed them. Part of the survivors had to be left at this point on the cold bleak mountainside of the Sierras in snow thirty feet deep. This heroic Mother procured the wood from the fortst and kept the fire burning night and day. The heat from the fire melted the snow until it became a shaft that reached to Mother Earth. From the forest somehow she procured a tree top and improvised a ladder and carried her five children to the bottom. One was a babe at breast. There was no food, only a few seeds, a little tea and a lump of sugar, probably not large. With snow water she brewed a little tea. She would pinch a small particle off the lump of sugar, and press it between their teeth. That and the warm tea for nine days sustained life in their bodies, which were near death's door to start with. Once when one seemed about to collapse she called her husband, who replied: "Let him die. He will be much better off than the rest of us." But not while there was breath or an atom of strength in this pioneer mother's body. A particle of sugar was pressed between his teeth and some warm tea.

She by the very intensity of her spirit, brought him back to life. All were finally rescued. No man that ever lived could rise to such an occasion, and the part played by Mrs. Breen is the part that would be played by every normal mother in proportion to her physical strength. Not that man did not perform in keeping with the highest tradition of mankind, without fan-fare, without waving of flags, or the inspiration of martial music or encouragement of superior officers. Without hope of reward—man with grim determination and deadly earnestness battled the elements, the snow, the rain, the frost and died. Men who knew not a single soul, nor were related to any of the ill-fated party, answered the cry of distress in the language that heroes talk. One Charles Stanton, a young man, thirty years of age, a journalist, was overcome and died by the side of the trail, his body was recovered in April. His last epistle was to his Mother in Heaven, the end of which was as follows:

"When death doth close my sad career,
And I before my God appear
There to hear his last decree
My only prayer there will be
To ever be by the side of thee,
My Mother."

It children could be taught to be more helpful or would come into the world less selfish, the lot of Mothers would be very much better. Several years ago, I drove across the Plaza and a boy was on the sidewalk, a very good boy as boys come and go, and I stated that I was driving by his house and would give him a ride. He replied, no, if he went home now he would have to milk the cow. Mother milked the cow that night and probably many nights. That boy has reached man's estate, occupies a position of trust, lives with his widowed mother, and anticipates her every wish. No queen has more attention.

If the sins of omission are recorded in the Book of Life, many of us are due for much mental anguish, when we appear before the Bar of Justice on the Final Judgment Day. The Great Exalted Ruler of the Universe will open the Book and will call the name of George H. Calanan, oldest of ten children, son of Mary Ann Calanan, who died in the summer of life from overwork. He will recite the delinquencies: would not get up in the morning when called, purposely to avoid milking the cow before school time, nor look towards the woodbox, and did conveniently forget to bring up the wood, when told to do so, played one old cat and two old cat, and marbles, mumblepeg, spun tops, went swimming, until it was so late the cow was often milked, the pigs and chickens fed and locked up and, when the dust in the summer was ankle deep, would sneak up to bed at every opportunity without washing his feet, this at a time when there was no washing machines and the water had to be packed. There are a thousand notations that I will not read. The recording angel will say, what excuses I have to offer and I will not answer him. He will again call and again I will not answer him, and when he looks over the top of the Book and sternly calls again, I will hang my head in shame and in agony of remorse, and a chastened spirit will cry out for mercy and pardon and from the very depths of my soul pray that Mother, and such as she, be entered into the realm of the blessed.

The tireless, patient soul that rocks the cradle, pictures in her mind the day when the boy or girl has reached maturity, occupying positions of trust, successful and respected members of society, and if this is so, none in this world will rejoice or be quite as proud as she or if you are failures, rating failure after failure, or are charged and found guilty of all the sins of iniquity, she will still have faith in us and find excuses.

Some sinister other person was responsible and if the whole world turn their backs on us. She is still the same sweet soul that in our youth, when we stubbed our toe or had a pain, or our feelings were hurt, gathered us in her arms, and wiped away our tears. No one else could do this.

If one of the flock does not thrive as does the others, to her it means an added strain on her strength, and this is done in such a manner that the others are not aware. If youth would appreciate how the Mothers worry about them, or would ask themselves, when about to embark on an adventure, if Mother would approve, they would never get into trouble.

If they would be honest with themselves in a world where reason and logic have for the moment disappeared. It is evident that the rule of man has failed, and we have heard it said that the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, if this is only partially so, if the mothers of the world would as of one voice ask the rulers of the world why this vast armament program, these super-battleships, flying fortresses, motorized monsters of frightful power, ask whose children are to be murdered, why all this propaganda, guile, deceit, lust for power, bloodshed? And failing to receive a satisfactory answer, would find means to take into their own hands the fate of their children and the world, the beautiful and abundant old world would become a garden of beauty, where your children could walk in the sunny paths of truth, righteousness and honor, make a living and find happiness.

Tonight, in spirit we gather the mothers of today and tomorrow in our arms, fold them to our bosom and proclaim them blessed, that their prayers will be answered, their hopes realized, their tears brushed away, that the blessings of Heaven will be showered upon them, that the dawn of each new day will bring to them a more abundant and bountiful life than the day that has preceded it. This is the hope and the prayer of every person here assembled.

OLSON INCREASES STATE'S DEFICIT

SACRAMENTO, May 16.—(UP)—The state spent $21,464,381 more than it took it during the first ten months of the current fiscal year, State Controller Harry B. Riley reported today.

The cash deficiency in the general fund was $76,351,374 on April 30, Riley announced, an increase of $30,920,560 in the last year and only $2,308,328 under the peak deficiency of $78,659,692 of last January 1.

Revenue of the state increased $6,997,251 to a total of $141,755,970 during the 10 month period involved in Riley's report, but expenditures increased even more—totalling $164,220,351, up $7,272,350.

The cost of unemployment relief increased $9,418,826 during the period, while bond interest and redemption costs rose $2,350,545; high schools, $1,382,212, and interest on registered warrants, $521,302.

Partially offsetting these increases, payments to needy aged declined $6,523,299; aid to needy children, $571,618; aid to needy blind, $174,860; unified construction program, $399,241; and elementary schools, $144,226.

Major increases in revenue were: sales tax $3,370,882; income tax, $1,657,379; inheritance tax, $1,654,278; liquor taxes and licenses, $371,779; insurance companies tax, $207,562; motor vehicle transportation tax, $171,256 and gift tax, $108,141.

NO NEW TAXES IS PLEDGE OF LEGISLATORS

By RALPH H. TAYLOR

The second half of the State Legislature's special session, which convenes on May 13, promises to be a meeting of vital significance to all working, producing California!

For the forthcoming session, judging from the recent declarations of leaders in both houses, is expected to bring a vigorous re-affirmation and amplification of the "back to economy and sanity" principles laid down at the Legislature's history-making meet in February.

There is every indication that the members of the bi-partisan economy bloc, who clamped down on extravagance, chiseling and corruption in the SRA, and shelved Governor Olson's demands for 50 million dollars in new taxes earlier this year, have sounded out home sentiment during the legislature recess—and will return to Sacramento even more firmly determined to stay by their ultimatum of "no new taxes!"

But pressure groups, on the other hand, will undoubtedly make a last-ditch, desperate stand to re-capture control of public purse strings and the SRA administrative set-up. Such groups as the Workers Alliance (which is now prohibited from collecting tribute, in the form of dues, from relief recipients); the SCMWA, which was largely supported by dues from SRA administrative workers; Labor's Non-Partisan League and the various communist "front" organizations, are planning to "put on the pressure" with every means at their command. Mail and telegraph barrages, noisy demonstrations, marches on the Capitol and other weapons will be brought into play in an effort to stampede legislators into voting bigger appropriations and new taxes.

California taxpayers, now that they have a fighting majority in the Legislature, determined to halt racketeering and put a ceiling on taxes, should make certain that they hold that majority—and that the legislators get warm support from their constituents, as well as the brickbats hurled at them by self-seeking minorities.

Senator Edward H. Tickle of Carmel, chairman of the Senate Revenue and Taxation Committee, and Assemblyman Rodney L. Turner of Kern county, chairman of a similar assembly committee, have both made unqualified pledges that they will oppose any and all new tax proposals at the approaching session. And both committees are expected to bring in definite recommendations against new taxation.

"We need to leave a few dollars in the cash register," said Senator Tickle, "so that business and industry can go ahead, with confidence, and put men back to work. If the Legislature serves notice that it will not permit continued increases in taxation, it will tremendously hearten private enterprise throughout the state, and will do more to solve the unemployment problem than we could accomplish through all the government bureaus in California."

And from Assemblyman Turner came the statement: "We feel that it is time to encourage expansion of industry and private employment of capital, instead of encouraging expansion of government and thereby placing new burdens on our taxpayers. We are convinced that no difficulty will be found in marketing warrants, so long as our state government is run efficiently and economically, and the Legislature continues to say 'No' to new taxes."

After a decade of trying to "spend ourselves rich," those statements—coming from the chairmen of the Legislature's two committees directly charged with the responsibility of recommending for or against new taxes—are definite encouragement to tax weary farmers, business men, home owners, and citizens generally.

There will be many battles at Sacramento over specific acts and methods to be used in bringing government to a point where it can (and must) live within its income, but if the lawmakers resolutely stay by their edict of "no new taxes," they will have fought a good fight.

an adjunct of the British war machine.' 'The immediate need to secure the fullest measure of military cooperation from Japan took precedence of all local considerations.'

American Far Eastern policy for decades had been a center of conflict between those who believed that America's destiny lay in the western hemisprere, and those who believed that the torch of Democracy and/or the American flag should be carried to the Orient. Because American vested interests in the Far East are small, and foreign trade an insignificant item in the national balance sheet, American policy has followed no consistent course. The growth of American isolation sentiment in the nineteen twenties was an insurmountable obstacle to the development of a positive policy toward the problems of the Pacific. From the point of view of many Americans, the problems of the Western Pacific were not American problems—there was no popular concern for vested interests anywhere west of Hawaii—and a deep rooted aversion to "pulling British chestnuts out of the fire."

"When the Sino-Japanese war broke out in 1937 American public opinion was still not ready to accept a direct and clearcut policy and the British re-emphasized their unwillingness to take the initiative in opposition to Japan. British Minister of Foreign Affairs, Anthony Eden, told the House of Commons that the British government would go 'step in step' with the United States, 'not rushing ahead but prepared to go as far and as fast.'

"If the American leadership since 1937 has been fumbling, the British support has been aimless. Overdoing the Eden caution, Great Britain has at times even lagged behind the United States or shown signs of compromising on issues not of general concern. The problem of developing American leadership was complicated by the fact that Japanese pressures were applied far more directly to British interests and nationals in the Far East than to American. But even though it was impossible always to move out in front the United States did on many occasions play along with the British in their dealings with Japan. In 1939, when Craigie was showing signs of weakening in the Tokyo discussions of the Tientsin blockade issues, the sudden removal of the American fleet from the Atlantic to the Pacific acted to fortify the British position. Again in 1939 the United States abrogated the long-standing commercial treaty with Japan and opened the way for embargo action. Time and again the United States took the initiative in protesting Japanese violatoins of American and other neutral rights and in encouraging widespread support of the Chinese National Government.

"In general, these measures have been effective only in keeping the record clear. They have not deterred Japan from the prosecution of the war in China though there can be no doubt that a less firm position would have invited even greater pressure. Still from the point of view of Great Britain, the Washington agreements failed and the outbreak of war in Europe called for emergency measures to protect the empire flank in the Far East.

"Embattled in Europe, Great Britain has shelved her concern over the regional problems of the Far East, and is striving to negotiate with Japan a settlement that will secure British interests in the western Pacific and neutralize the Japanese navy.

"In this reversion to pre-League diplomacy, Great Britain is resuming direction of western policies in the Far East, and abandoning the philosophy of the Washington agreements. Apparently she has asked for and gained the forebearance of the United States which have taken no step that would thwart an Anglo-Japanese understanding. History will not necessarily repeat itself, but the circumstances of World War I and II are not too different to warrant an expectation that "the immediate need to secure the fullest measure of militry cooperation from Japan will take precedence of all local considerations.

"In the long run Great Britain may have to pay through the nose. Reestablishment of a Far Eastern balance of power favorable to the western powers may be even more difficult in the future than it has been since 1922, for a settlement negotiated now will give Japan a badly needed opportunity to catch her breath and assist her to consolidate her position."

SCHOOL BOARD FILLS ALL POSTS IN CITY SCHOOLS

MUSCARDINI GRAVEL

J. P. Muscardini, Frank Misner and others have a lease on the Will Davis gravel ground along Deer Creek in the Willow Valley district east of Nevada City. The deposit extends for several hundred yards along the creek. The group have been working for some time rigging up machinery to handle the gravel. They have installed a Pan-American jig, put in a pipe line with fire hose and nozzle for hydraulic operations. A 1939 automobile motor is used to pump water. Besides gold recovered all black sand containing fine flour gold will be saved by the jig and shipped to a smelter. There are five men employed.

LAVA CAP MINE

RICHTER & SONS DRAGLINE

The William Richter and Sons dragline operations above Scotts Flat dam were shut down Sunday through complaints by the city of Grass Valley which was receiving roily water into their reservoir. The Grass Valley water users purchase their water from the Nevada Irrigation District and considerable trouble was also experienced recently when repairs were made at high elevations on the ditch system of the district. The mine operators have put out considerable money and time getting the dragline down on Deer Creek above the Scotts Flat dam.

BOUNDARY MINE

Crews are driving tunnel and sinking in an eeffort to deteremine size and values of veins in the Boundary mine at Grass Valley's southern city limit. John Becker of Town Talk is owner and operator of the mine.
